TREXLER SNOWS OPPONENT UNDER IN 3 TO 1 DEFEAT

Chief Justice Renominated, With Nearly Half Million Votes

CARRIES ALL COUNTIES

Taylor, Republican Nominee for Sec'y of Internal Affairs, Has Good Lead

HARRISBURG, May 17—The vote for Chief Justice Frank M. Trexler of the Superior Court, renominated for another term in Tuesday's primary, neared the half million mark today as he snowed his only opponent in the Republican primary, Joseph J. Regan, Jr., under a more than three to one defeat.

Carrying everyone of the 67 counties on the Republican ticket, Judge Trexler's majority for more than two-thirds of the state's 7934 precincts was more than 300,000, 6174 precincts, including complete but unofficial returns from Philadelphia, Allegheny and 26 other counties gave Trexler 441,919, Regan 135,720. Representative Chester A. Rhodes, endorsed by both Democratic factions, maintained a wide lead over Judge Trexler in the Democratic primary in which the sitting Judge was also entered. Though he lost all other counties, Judge Trexler carried his own, Lehigh, on the Democratic side, 4928 precincts including complete but unofficial returns from Philadelphia, Allegheny and 26 other counties gave Regan 25,652, Trexler, 45,515.

Harold Taylor, Republican nominee for Secretary of Internal Affairs, maintained an easy two to one lead over Philip H. Dewey, the incumbent, today, with more than two-thirds of the state's 7934 precincts reported. Taylor, a Dauphin county commissioner, backed by the regular Republican organization, scored a tremendous vote in Philadelphia, where Dewey fared badly. 6484 precincts, including Philadelphia and Allegheny counties complete, today gave Taylor 411,259 and Dewey 295,462. Thomas A. Logue, Philadelphia, backed by the regular Democratic organization, scored a smashing victory over Representative Narbert Fitzgerald of Erie, who ran as the nominee of the independent party faction. 5741 precincts including Philadelphia and Allegheny complete, gave Logue 219,903 and Fitzgerald 78,504.

SMALL NUMBER OF TOTS EXAMINED AT CLINIC

Child Health Day Observed at Community House; Only 28 Examined

Child Health Day or May Day examinations are conducted free of charge by local physicians and nurses annually. George White's "Scandals" Are Coming To The Grand Fox Film scoops the entertainment world in presenting one of the foremost theatrical institutions, George White's "Scandals," at the Grand Theatre tonight and Friday. This is the first motion picture edition of the production.

Besides the original "Scandals" girls that were taken to Hollywood from New York, White also took with him his talented staff of song writers, dance directors and technicians, capitalizing on the proven ability of his staff, he was able to inject into the "Scandals" all the song hits, dance routines and spectacle that have made his past endeavors a by-word on Broadway.

The film is constructed around a tender romantic story, inter-woven with the spectacular revues and song hits. It is the story of a young man in the show who, although he loves his leading lady, falls victim to the attraction of a scheming young debutante, a celebrity-seeker of high standing. Realizing that this new romance threatens to ruin his show, George White, as the producer, devises a plan whereby the young man realizes his mistake, and goes back to his former love.

Rudy Vallee, Jimmy Durante, Alice Faye, Adrienne Ames, Cliff Edwards, Gregory Ratoff, Dixie Dunbar and Gertrude Michael are only a few of the principals of whom the large cast is composed.

NUTRITION AND LONG LIFE

The new plumber, he has discovered in his own spiritual upliftment, is not a tapper of smelly sewers, mender of leaky pipes, thawer of frozen mains and prowler among cobwebs. Plumbing codes, high wages and fancy-free convention orators have transformed him from plodding and unimaginative mechanic into a hybrid, half artist and half business man, whose life and work are dedicated to public service. Imbued with the thought that his art is the foundation and salvation of civilization—for both are closely associated with sanitation—he glories in his work, confident human life could not long endure without him and his tools.

What will the booster plumber say to the decision of the American Health Association that the heart of the health problem is not sanitation but nutrition? Is this the birth of a new moot question, the basis of another resolution for school boys and girls to debate over?

Milk is the particular food dealt with in the association's discussion of nutrition. Fresh studies made with laboratory animals verify and emphasize its health-giving quality. Carefully controlled experiments demonstrated that milk added to an already adequate diet resulted in better general health and greater resistance to disease. The second generation showed an improvement even more pronounced. From these experiments it appears that higher milk consumption in the present generation will make for better health in the next.

Frequent testing should be made to keep milk up to standard, for as the great food value of milk becomes clearer it is increasingly important that it should be wholesome and undiluted.

APPETITES AND BOOKS

The secret of why school textbooks cost so much is out. It was revealed by testimony in a national recovery-code hearing behind closed doors held last month in Washington.

The testimony has just been made public. It disclosed the expenditure of half a million dollars by textbook publishers on "meals" for public officials.

The estimate was given by a representative of one of the country's large book-publishing concerns which caters to school trade. It was necessary, or at least advisable, he said, that salesmen buy meals for officials charged with the task of purchasing school textbooks.

This expense, naturally, is added to the cost of the books; the larger the appetite, the higher the price of books.

The hearing failed to reveal whether the manufacturers' agents had ever run across any officials whose appetites ranged beyond the limits of a table menu. The answer to this question might throw additional light on the cost of textbooks.

"MA CINDERELLA" by Harold Bell Wright

SYNOPSIS

Diane Carrol—young artist and wealthy orphan, more interested in her work than society—visits the little village of Pine Knob in the Ozarks. Her sunny disposition melts the usual frigidity of the mountaineers towards strangers and they accept her as one of the "home folks"—all except Ann Haskel, whose word is law in Pine Knob. Diane, nevertheless, is fascinated by Ann about whom she has heard conflicting stories of generosity and hardness. The mountain woman seems to be avoiding Diane, but her good-for-nothing stepson, Jeff Todd, follows the artist everywhere. Ann has a son of her own, John Herbert Haskel, whom she sent away years ago, following the death of her first husband. Diane's best friends among the mountaineers are "Uncle Jimmie" and "Aunt Josie" Cartwright who have promised to protect her from the annoying Jeff. One day, Ann comes upon Diane painting in Shady Creek Valley and brutally asks, "What be you a-doin' here?" Diane apologizes for trespassing. Ann's demeanor changes immediately and she says: "You're welcome. I got sense to see you ain't a-hurtin' nobody."

CHAPTER VIII.

Presently Diane said with quiet enthusiasm: "I'm awfully glad you happened to find me here this morning, Mrs. Haskel."

The mountain woman looked at her sharply before answering. Then again the artist saw the shadow of a smile.

"What is that 'bout me a-happening to ketch you here that makes you glad?"

"I have been wanting to know you ever since I came," smiled Diane. "I've heard so much about you."

"Jimmie Cartwright is a gabby old fool. She's another. So's Pappy Giles. Talk their bad-burned heads off, give 'em hell a chance. We uns in the backwoods air mostly a triffin' no-count, come-day-go-day-Gawd-send-Sunday. lot. This hyean country's all right—natchally. Hit's the folks what's a-spoilin' hit." Her face softened and her voice was not so harsh. "These hyean woods an' mountains an' valleys an' streams an' springs they ain't no ways like we uns what's a-livin' among 'em. Hit would sure be a Gawd-mighty's blessing if folks could only be an' live like the trees, now wouldn't hit?"

The many tales she had heard about Ann Haskel raced through Diane's mind. Her despotic rule over the countryside; the rescue of Pappy Giles and his invalid wife; the night riders; the newcomers she had forced to move on; the poor people she had helped; the undesirable she had driven out; her boy, the last of the Haskels, whom she had put so completely out of the backwoods life, and out of her own life as well. When she had first discovered the artist in that place, and had made her presence known to Diane, she had been as the Lodge people described her—suspicious, hard, dangerous even. But now, as the woman sat there on the ground in the very heart of her mountain wilderness, she seemed to relax—to lower her guard, as it were. It was as if she felt that she might safely snatch a moment's rest. And Diane, with the true artist's vision, saw all at once something wonderfully fine and strong in that hard, uncompromising, weather-beaten face. The woman must have been beautiful in her youth, with a strong, wild, true sort of beauty. If the boy, John Herbert, was anything like his mother, thought Diane, the world would surely hear of the last of the Haskels.

Aloud, she said, gently: "But God created human beings as truly as He made the trees, didn't He?"

"Not like they be. He didn't. He only give 'em their start. Folks mostly make themselves. What a body makes of himse'f depends a lot on the chance he gets. Sometimes hit depends on somethin' else—somethin' nobody can't no ways help. Like for instance, whar hit's borned into in the breed. You, all at the Lodge down under, you're a heap more triffin' an' worthless even than we uns what was borned an' raised right hyean in the backwoods. An' look at the chance you—"

And that—considering the size of all got! We uns don't know nothin' an' got less; you uns know everythin' an' got everything. We uns air mostly a-doin' the best we know; you uns ain't a-givin' a doggone. You should take shame to yourselves, bein' like you be with all the chance you've had."

Diane flushed. "Evidently you haven't a very good opinion of us."

"You're turned right I ain't. I sure like folks what's got somethin' to 'em. I'd a sight rather have 'em right down bad than to have 'em jest plum' nothin', like you uns. Take you, for instance, do?"

"I war a-wantin' to drink, I'd hit me a good hefty snort of real licker. An' I'd take her straight. Look at them cigarets you're all the time a-suckin'—jest paper an' fancy store tobaccor. Me, I smoke a real pipe an' real tobaccor—long green what I raise and cure myself. I'd hit 'em with little poles no bigger'n a willer switch, an' make-believe-fies. If a body wants fish, let him git to work an' set him a trot-line, or take him a gig an' kill hisse'f a real mess. An' nothin' to make-believe fishin'—a-killin' poor little minnies what ain't big'nough to smelt up the skillet even. You uns ain't a-livin' real; you're jest playin' at livin'; hit's all jest make-believe to you. You don't even dress real. Go 'round half the time a-wearin' funny man-clothes—the balance of the time you ain't got on 'nough to wad a shotgun."

"But, Mrs. Haskel, don't you think—"

"You hush till I've done said my say. You uns can't even take keer of your menfolks. They're poor critters, them Lodge men. Menfolks mostly air. Four out of five husbands ain't worth keepin'; 'tother one wouldn't be if hit war't for some woman a-lookin' after him. Every woman's jest natchally got to take keer of some man, soon or late. Seems like that's what Gawd-a-mighty made 'em females fer. Hit mostly happens, too, that the man a woman's takin' keer of ain't the one she's a-thinkin' most about."

"Very good, Mrs. Haskel," Diane returned, with spirit. "But I certainly object to your putting me in the do-nothing-but-pretend class. I work, and I work hard. My father was a worker, too. No one ever accused Bill Carrol of not livin' real, as you call it. And he taught me to live the same way. My friends are all people who work for everything they have and who value above everything else the realities of life."

The mountain woman looked at her shrewdly. "Be you a-takin' keer of one of them Lodge men?"

"Indeed I am not!"

"Bet you're a-thinkin' 'bout some man you'd like to be a-takin' keer of?"

"I am not; I am too interested in my work."

"Meanin' them pitchers you're all the time a-paintin'?"

"Meanin' exactly that," Diane retorted sharply.

"Huh! Don't 'pear to be much work 'bout hit, 'cordin' to my way of thinkin'."

"I suppose not. But perhaps that is because you know so little about it."

"I reckon you done said hit," admitted Ann Haskel, with an odd smile; and there was a curious, wistful look on her rugged face, and a strange eagerness in her voice as she added: "I'd sure admire to have you tell me 'bout hit—'bout what you call your work, I mean."

Partly in the spirit of defending herself against the charge of uselessness, and partly with a desire to help this backwoods woman to understand a little that real living was not wholly material and utilitarian as she saw it, Diane talked of art and of those who labored and sacrificed in its service. Ann Haskel listened intently.

"So you see," the artist concluded, "one must work, and work hard, to accomplish anything worth while in the arts. 'Dabblin' simply counts for nothin' at all."

"Uncle Jimmie 'tows you make a right smart of money with your pitchers. Do you?"

"I make enough," Diane answered, shortly. "But if the money I make was my only interest in painting, I would never again touch a brush."

And that—considering the size of the fortune which Diane Carrol inherited from her father—was so literally true that the artist smiled at the thought. It would be quite useless, she reflected, to explain that she was a very wealthy young woman and, therefore, could not be reasonably charged with painting pictures for money. And besides, Bill Carrol's daughter preferred always to stand on her own feet. With her it was a matter of pride—pride not understandable to many, perhaps, but—well—as those who knew her best sometimes remarked, "That was Diane."

"You're a likely-lookin' young woman," said Ann. "How come you ain't got no man to be a-lookin' after?"

"It is all I can do to take care of myself," Diane returned, with a shade of bitterness, meaning far more than the mountain woman knew. With her knowledge of life and her downright honesty the selfishness of the Carrol fortune had long since faced the truth that her pride in being valued for herself alone would likely result in her remaining single to the end of her days.

"Pears like you got some sense," admitted the other. "But hit'd be right smart more decent, 'cordin' to my way of thinkin', if you was to git yourself married regular 'stead of playin' 'round with the men like you young city wimmen do these days."

Diane was furious. "Are you deliberately trying to insult me, Mrs. Haskel?" she demanded.

"You can take hit or leave hit," retorted the mountain woman, harshly. "I know what I've seen every summer them Lodge folks has been a-hellin' 'round this neighborhood. I ain't a plum' fool jest 'cause I've lived my life in the woods."

Something in the mountain woman's voice—something, perhaps, which Diane herself had thought of certain of the vacationists, caused the girl to smother her indignation.

"I don't care what you think you know, Mrs. Haskel," she said, calmly. "You certainly do not know me."

"Mebbe not—yet," came the grim retort. "Gawd any folks, have you? Almost against her will Diane told briefly of her childhood under Aunt Jessica's guardianship; of her father, his work and their comradeship; of her student days; and that she was now alone in the world.

SHORT CUTS TO THE DINNER TABLE

Did you ever have friends visit you who wanted to see your interesting town from beginning to end? It's been my pleasure to have some friends with me who want to do just this thing before going home (and home to them is abroad) and I'll tell you, friend homemakers, it's a good thing these visits happen once in a while, for I'm afraid many of us would forget just what a wonderful city we live in if they didn't, don't you? You know, they say it takes visitors from out of town to make us realize our historical background. Well, when I do a job, I do it thoroughly, and I'm going to see to it that there isn't a stone left unturned when it comes to showing these friends every nook and corner in Philadelphia. The other day we went to the Art Museum and, of course, my individual interest centered around the Pennsylvania Dutch kitchen, and while looking around that room with its long table, with what seemed to me very narrow benches on either side, I rather congratulated myself on my good fortune in having the equipment of this day and age with which to work. The array of more or less crude utensils mounted on legs or tripods was simply appalling.

There were pots, frying pans and grilles, not to mention the enormous kettle hanging on the crane directly over the spot where the fire would be, and a lot of other utensils, the use or purpose of which I could not imagine.

I have always admired the spirit of the pioneer woman, and my admiration has been rising ever since that visit to the Art Museum.

I'm going to tell you more about that kitchen next week. I'd do it now, but I must get down to the business of a few request recipes. Our first request is for Mrs. L. R. Ransom.

Creamed Apricot Delight

- 1 cupful apricot pulp
- 2 cupfuls marshmallows, cut in quarters
- ½ cupful chopped nuts
- 1 cupful heavy cream—whipped

Combine pulp and marshmallows.

Let it stand in refrigerator for one hour or more, then fold in stiffly beaten cream. Pile lightly in sherbet glasses and sprinkle with chopped nuts. Return to refrigerator until ready to serve.

Honey Meringue

(Cooked)

(For Mrs. M. R. Branson)

Heat one cupful of honey until it spins a thread when dropped from a spoon. Pour honey slowly into the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs, beating all the while. Continue beating until meringue is fluffy and will hold its shape.

RECIPES

Tomatoes Stuffed with Caviar

Choose small ripe tomatoes and hollow out the centers. Mix caviar with chopped egg whites and fill centers. Serve on a platter garnished with water cress. With the above dishes serve potato chips, radishes, giant ripe olives and spring onions and small Parker House rolls. These can be heated at the last minute. The following delicious dessert is very attractive and decorative and also has the merit of being ready in advance.

Topsy Trifle

Make a soft custard in a double boiler, using 1 pint milk, 3 eggs and ½ cup sugar. Beat eggs and sugar together, add to hot milk and stir till custard coats spoon. Cool and flavor with almond. Have ready a rather stale sponge cake. Slice it and line the bottom of a glass dish with the slices. Moisten well with sherry and cover with jam or jelly. Cover this with macaroons dipped in wine. Then another layer of cake and jam and so on till the dish is three-quarters full. Pour over this the chilled custard

Top with the stiffly beaten whites of 2 eggs, beaten with 4 tablespoons of sugar. Add to this 3 tablespoons of jelly and serve cold.

Molded Salads

For the ordinary "mine run" of meals there are many short cuts such as preparing a molded salad in advance. Here are some that are especially appropriate for this time of year.

Fruit Salad

Put 1 beaten egg in double boiler, add 2 tablespoons pure vinegar and 2 tablespoons sugar and stir constantly till thick and smooth. Cool and fold in ½ cup whipped cream and 1 cup white cherries, 1 cup pineapple, 1 cup marshmallows and 1 orange. Place in a mold and set in refrigerator (not in freezing compartment). Let stand several hours. Serve in nests of crisp lettuce and garnish with mayonnaise or whipped cream.

Jellied Ham Salad

2 cups finely diced ham

- 1 tablespoon granulated gelatin
- ¼ cup cold water
- ¾ cup boiling water
- ¼ cup vinegar
- 2 hard cooked eggs, sliced
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup diced celery
- 1 chopped pimento
- ½ chopped green pepper
- 2 tablespoons minced onion
- ½ cup mayonnaise.

Soak gelatin in cold water and dissolve in boiling water. Add vinegar and salt. Cool. When mixture begins to jell mix in all the other ingredients excepting the eggs. Rinse a mold in cold water. Arrange the egg slices on the bottom and sides. Then pour in the ham mixture. Set in a cold place until firm. Serve on a bed of shredded lettuce.

Jellied Salad

Soak 2 teaspoons gelatin in 3 tablespoons cold water. Dissolve over hot water and add slowly to 1 cup mayonnaise. Chop 2 slices onion, 1 cup cabbage and 2/3 cup raw carrot and 1 green pepper. Add to dressing, mold, chill and turn out on lettuce.

MUSICALES PROVIDE A FINE OPPORTUNITY FOR STYLE DISPLAY

By Nadia De Beaud

(I. N. S. Fashion Correspondent)

PARIS — (INS) — The coming season of Paris, which always brings an influx of all the great musicians from the world over, is getting its start in homes, where musicales are giving many artists public appearances. The Marquise de Saint Paul, who is herself an artist, had as an added attraction at a brilliant affair she gave recently Mrs. Hilda Roosevelt, a singer of note in France, whose name is well known through the opera houses of France.

Among the guests there was Madame

Chlapowska, wife of the Polish Ambassador to France, in a charming crepe de chine gown of brown with white print designs, like a sprinkling of ostrich feathers. The long sleeves were full just below the shoulders. The Duchess de La Rochefoucauld, the former Mattie Elizabeth Mitchell, was in elegant black, like so many others.

RECORD OF BLIND STUDENT

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. — (INS) — Blind since he was 4 years old, Archie Franks, 20, is establishing an unusual record in high school despite his handicap. Of 1,921 students he is one of 70 to become a member of Sigma Epsilon fraternity, an organization which accepts only students who make an average of 90 or more in all studies.

DESCRIBES COSTUME WORN BY WINNER OF RACE AT AUTEUIL

By Nadia De Beaud
(I. N. S. Fashion Correspondent)

PARIS — (INS) — The opening of the Paris season at Auteuil, when the pick of the best stables ran for the Prize of the President of the Republic under the patronage of the President himself and Madame Lebrun was the occasion for another triumph for Americans in France, since the $15,000 prize was won by Jean-Victor, from the stables of Mrs. Constance Clidage, the well-known Boston society woman.

Congratulated by President and Madame Lebrun, she looked charming in a tiny black straw hat, very shallow and boat-shaped, its only ornament being a little ribbon bow in front. Her coat was relieved at the neck by a white jabot and she wore elbow length gloves of white kid.

NEW MILK RECORD

ST. ANN'S BREAKS INTO THE WINNING COLUMN

BRISTOL TWILIGHT LEAGUE
Schedule for Tonight
INDEPENDENTS vs. ST. ANN'S
(St. Ann's Field)

By T. M. Juno
Breaking into the win column, the St. Ann's A. A. nine handed the Damp Wash A. A. its fourth straight setback of the infant season last night on its own diamond. Final tabulations were St. Ann's, 6; Damp Wash, 2.

The Saints took the lead in the first inning and were never headed throughout. The only scare thrown into them was in the fourth when the laundrymen pushed two tallies over the platter. Three runs by the Wood Streeters in the fourth put the game on ice.

"Spike" Scordia, the losing hillman, was touched for seven blows by the winning aggregation. But the story of Scordia's defeat is given on the number of base on balls he issued. Seven times batters were given free tickets to first, and these gifts kept the Washers twirling in hot water all night.

The winning hurler, "Charlie" Whyno, in his first appearance on the hill this season, was in 1933 form and limited the Damp Wash team to four hits. Two of these were beat out hits by Nicols, the first sacker of the losers. Another was a hit beaten out by Mulligan while the only clean safety was a long double to right center by Lane. Whyno's control was effective, not one pass being issued.

The "Saints" pushed over a run in the first when Pico beat out a hit to short and advanced to second when Lane threw out Tosti. Oriola then singled and Pico crossed. Two passes followed but with the sacks loaded, Scordia fanned Angelo.

In the second two more tallies were manufactured. With two outs, Whyno and Nico walked and worked the double-steal. Tosti singled and both runners dented the pentagon.

Damp Wash counted twice in the fourth. Nicols and Sabatini singled, Brescia fled to Whyno and was out on the infield fly rule but Whyno missed the fly and before the ball was retrieved, Nicols crossed. Lane scored Sabatini with a double. Calla fled to Fields and Lane was doubled at second.

St. Ann's ended the scoring with three runs in the fifth. Tonight St. Ann's will meet the Independents on St. Ann's field.

SNAKE WAS BELT
DENVER — (INS) — "There's a big snake in my back yard," Mrs. Charles H. Thomas phoned police. Patrolmen Tom Durkop and William Hassler rushed to the Thomas home. They searched the premises and found only a knitted belt, lying coiled in the grass. Then Mrs. Thomas recalled having dropped the belt a few hours before she called police.

BIBLE USED AS TORCH

NEW YORK — (INS) — An investigation by Chief Fire Marshal Brophy revealed that a recent fire in the Collegiate Reformed Church of St. Nicholas was of incendiary origin. Pages from a Bible were used as torches to set fires in five places in the building.

Here's real Economy!

This owner says:
"17 MILES TO THE GALLON!"

Having driven my 1934 Pontiac 6116 miles, I want to inform you how well-satisfied I am with it.
"... It has speed, power, comfort, acceleration, smoothness, roadability, and ease of handling. From an economy standpoint it may interest you to know I enjoy about seventeen miles to the gallon. I drive fast most all the time and the car is still too new to tell what the final gas mileage consumption will be."
"You will recall that I was going to buy a Six but am glad I didn't, for I can see that this car will be just as economical to drive."
